LINDBERGH TUNES UP FOR HIS PARIS FLIGHT

LITTLE FALLS HOME BOY IS TO FLY SOON

WILL TAKE COUPLE OF SANDWICHES AND SOME WATER WHEN HE TAKES OFF

WESTERN MAN, PREVIOUSLY NATIONALLY UNKNOWN, NOW ATTRACTS ATTENTION

New York, May 13.—(UP)—Despite the sympathetic interest in the search for the missing men, Nungesser and Coli, attention had clearly shifted today to the three planes which planned to defy the increasingly ominous list of mishaps to men who seek to fly between New York and Paris. The French paid felt the jinx when a fire slightly damaged their plane a few days before they started, forcing postponement of their flight.

Had it not been for that postponement, they might have met fine weather on the Atlantic which would have enabled them to complete the trip safely. Byrd's recent crash was not enough to keep him out of the race, but it delayed him for weeks. The Bellanca plane has been delayed by experiments with wireless sets which didn't work properly and similar occurrences which, though they could not be called accidents, have given other competitors a chance to get into the race.

Lindbergh, the 25-year-old Nebraskan who alone of the three is eligible for the $25,000 Orteig prize, so far has escaped unscathed. In his ability to make his way across the continent without a trace of trouble, those who follow signs and hunches in sporting events saw an indication of victory for him in the race for honor of being the first to fly without a stop from this city to the French capital.

His 14 hours of flying from San Diego to St. Louis Tuesday night and Wednesday and the seven hours at the stick en route from St. Louis to New York apparently did not tire him, but he faces more than 30 hours of constant strain on the Paris flight.

The prospect did not seem to worry him today, however, as he went nonchalantly about the task of tuning up his machine. He said a couple of sandwiches and some water in a canteen would be his equipment for the journey, and he seemed confident that neither he nor the plane had suffered from the long grind.

Arrival of Lindbergh and a few moments later arrival of Byrd's great Fokker plane from Hasbrouck Heights created a dramatic hour at Curtiss Field last night.

Lindbergh had been an unknown in the east and not until he arrived in St. Louis from San Diego without a stop did he draw much attention.

But late yesterday afternoon his peculiar looking gray monoplane was sighted from the flying field, first a speck in the distance and then materializing into a swift flying plane. It circled the field, an unfamiliar landing place to this adventurer from the west, a couple of times, and then alighted as gracefully as a bird.

A crowd rushed up cheering but its breath was fairly taken away when a window in the fuselage was opened and out stepped an immaculate, bashfully smiling young gentleman who hardly looked the 25 years he boasts and certainly not the title of captain. He smiled and the crowd cheered again.

He had been more than seven hours in the air yet his face was clean and his cheeks pink, his flying togs were spotless and there wasn't even a blemish on his stiff collar.

He saw his plane wheeled out of the runway, went to dinner and in another hour was back at work, inspecting, tinkering and fussing with the machine, smiling all the while.

The Ryan monoplane he flies in size is between the tiny Bellanca and the giant Fokker, and its construction resembles more nearly that of the Bellanca. The driver's compartment, however, is so arranged that Lindbergh cannot see ahead excepting by the use of periscopes, which makes landing difficult.

"I don't expect to land much between here and Paris," Lindbergh explained, however.

After the morning weather reports had been gone over, all three sets of pilots said they would not leave today, but the Bellanca plane's crew and backers said they hoped to get away tomorrow morning, and every indication was that Lindbergh and perhaps even Byrd would follow.

Detroit, Mich., May 13.—Captain Charles Lindbergh, who is planning to leave soon on a flight across the Atlantic to Paris, is the son of former Congressman Charles H. Lindbergh of Minnesota, according to John C. Lodge, president of the Detroit Common Council.

The youthful aviator's mother is Mrs. Evangeline Lodge Lindbergh, a niece of Lodge. She is a chemistry teacher at Cass technical high school here.

"He is a big chap," Lodge said today, "and the best kind of a regular fellow. I understand the St. Louis Board of Commerce had his plane built to his specifications."

Louisiana's Famed "Sugar Bowl" at Flood's Mercy

HOMES OF 100,000 PEOPLE IN DIRE PERIL

FLOOD FORMS 10 SEPARATE CREVASSES NEAR COTTONPORT

EACH OF THE BREAKS IS WIDENING RAPIDLY TODAY, REPORTED

By E. W. LEWIS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New Orleans, La., May 13.—Louisiana's famed "sugar bowl" and the homes of between 75,000 and 100,000 persons were at the mercy of flood waters today.

Defying efforts of levee workers at the headwaters of Bayou Des Glaises, the flood swept through, forming ten separate crevasses near Cottonport. Each of the breaks was widening today and no hope was seen of saving the valley from devastation.

All southern Avoyelles Parish was rapidly being inundated, including towns of Bunkie and Cottonport. Practically all of the territory immediately threatened has been evacuated, according to John M. Parker, state flood dictator. Livestock was driven to the highlands and inhabitants of the "bowl" left their homes.

Crops, buildings, railroads and highways in the area, however, will be ruined. The flood is sweeping across the valley at the rate of 20 miles a day.

Rescue boats were stationed at Simmsport in Old river ready for an emergency which may develop. The waters from the Bayou Des Glaises break will flow south, spreading through St. Landry and St. Martin parishes west of the Atchafayala river.

Atchafayala levees were expected to act as a temporary barrier to prevent spread of the flood eastward toward the Mississippi. Engineers predicted the dike would hold in this section, but it is low in St. Martin Parish and may be washed over.

If the Vixen flood rises higher, the Atchafayala levees will be unable to stop the water flowing into Iberville Parish, it was said.

Effect of the levee breaks on the Mississippi proper cannot be determined, according to Major H. C. Holcombe, district engineer. The crest levels of the river may or may not be lowered by the break north of New Orleans, he said.

New Orleans, La., May 13.—Flood waters clipped another great section off the Bayou Des Glaises levee today at Bordelonville in the heart of Big Bend.

At 9 A. M. a telephone message from Simmesport confirmed the break engineers and relief workers saying it was already 150 feet wide.

The levee was gradually cracking eastward, dooming the "sugar bowl" lands of Louisiana, where 150,000 persons have lived and property worth over $10,000,000 lies in the path of the flood.

The pent-up waters were streaming through a series of crevasses between Cottonport and Bordelonville ranging in width from 20 feet to 700 feet at Moreauville, midway between the small town of Cottonport, already under water, and Bordelonville.

District engineers said they hoped the east side of the bend would hold. Should the tide break through there, the entire force of crevasse waters in the Old river "sink" will have a direct outlet through the fertile lands southward.

The Bayou Des Glaises is 130 miles northwest of here and normally flows through Old river into the Mississippi. The flood, however, has surged through the area north of there and turned Old river into a great lake which at last has found an outlet in the crevasses which came during the night and today.

Sir Douglas Hogg, attorney general, in charge of the bill for the government, announced the bill would be altered to make only ringleaders of illegal strikes punishable, instead of providing jail sentences for all participants. The bill prohibits general strikes and restricts the labor unions in various ways.

Labor members sang "The Red Flag" and the "Marseillaise" as the session dragged on through the night, and frequent demands that the government resign were shouted during divisions.

STILL COMMENT ON THE FATE OF 2 FRENCHMEN

NUNGESSER AND COLI LAST SEEN FLYING OVER IRELAND

SUPPOSITION ADVANCED THEY MAY HAVE LANDED IN LABRADOR

New York, May 13.—(UP)—The only suggestion of a clue to the fate of the French fliers who left Paris Sunday for New York, but have not been seen since they flew over Ireland between 10 and 11 o'clock Sunday morning, lay in reports that a half dozen persons at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, said they had heard the droning of an airplane's engines about 9:30 A. M. Monday. So far as could be learned, no plane flew over that region Monday morning unless it was the White Bird of the Frenchmen, and the report speeded the search along the coasts of Newfoundland and Nova Scotia.

Nungesser and Coli had expected to reach Nova Scotia before dawn Monday, but the bad weather in mid-Atlantic might have delayed them several hours.

Thorough search of the English Channel on the theory that the plane did not even reach Ireland failed to disclose a trace of it. Ships at sea reported no signs of the lost craft, and the slight hope for the safety of the aviators lay largely in the theory that they had reached the American coast and been forced down in some wilderness region where they could not communicate with civilization.

Washington, May 13.—With experts advancing a theory that Chas. Nungesser and Francois Coli may have turned over Labrador, the navy department today was hopeful the missing French aviators may be safe and that some word will come from them enabling their rescue.

If the fliers are in Labrador, however, weeks or even months may pass before they are able to make their way to civilization, the navy believes, pointing out that the country is wild and thinly populated.

The Labrador theory was evolved by two experts of the navy hydrographic office, Lieutenants Logan C. Ramsey and Earl H. Kinsaid, after a careful study of weather conditions, and was presented to Secretary of the Navy Wilbur. Their investigation disclosed that wind conditions along the route "were the very best that could be hoped for."

The theory is based on the assumption that the flight was not interrupted by engine trouble and that the course followed was the one mapped out at first. The weather report shows that the aviators would have struck a storm center moving northward across their course, and might either have been blown from their course or have turned north purposely to avoid the storm center. This would have carried them over Labrador.

In either of these cases, according to the experts' report, they would have encountered the coast of Labrador about midnight Sunday or shortly thereafter. If they did, they might have continued on until daylight and found themselves in an unknown country with peaks as high as 3,500 jutting up along the coastline. There are many lakes in the valleys, and the fliers may have landed on one of them—their best chance to escape death.

MRS. SNYDER AND GRAY TO BE ELECTROCUTED

TWO HEAR THE SENTENCES OF DEATH PASSED UPON THEM

AS PUNISHMENT FOR MURDER OF ALBERT SNYDER

By PAUL W. WHITE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Court Room, Long Island City, N. Y., Cay 13.—Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray stood before Justice Townsend Scudder today and heard the sentence of death passed upon them, as their punishment for the murder of Albert Snyder.

Justice Scudder ordered they be electrocuted at Sing Sing prison the week of June 20, 1927.

The suburban housewife and corset salesman, caught up in an illicit romance that shattered two homes, were straining and tense as Justice Scudder pronounced the doomsday words.

"You shall be put in solitary confinement at Sing Sing prison until the week of June twentieth at which time you shall be put to death as prescribed by law in this state," the justice slowly pronounced.

The expected outcries, such as condemned men and women sometimes cannot control as they face the forfeit the commonwealth demands, did not materialize.

There was suffering in Ruth Snyder's eyes and her head was bowed but she did not weep. Judd Gray's eyelids closed and his jaw quivered but the composure of the stoic little man survived the fateful sentence.

Both defendants will be spared the trip to the prison at Ossining until Monday. Although police motorcycles were stationed outside the courthouse, it was decided to postpone the journey.

All of the seats in the great court room, where twelve men listening to the evidence against the two and found them guilty of murder in the first degree after little more than an hour deliberation last Monday, were filled at 9:30 A. M. today, but the vast crowds of the trial were missing.

Two juries, trying minor felonies, were in the panel boxes and had front row seats for the sentencing of the country's most noted slayers.

It was exactly ten o'clock when Justice Scudder came to the bench, accompanied by Supreme Court Justice Carswell. Newspapermen pressed forward around the counsel table. The spectators stood.

Then came the prisoners.

But the woman, despite her mourning garb, was surprisingly fresh.

"There she is," the crowd whispered and pressed forward for a better look at the woman. On such a grey day as this, Mrs. Snyder might have been doing the house work in her Queens village home, having seen her nine-year-old daughter Lorraine off to school, but instead she was before the bar of justice, with death near at hand.

Gray stood only three feet from his former mistress, but their eyes never met. His customary neatness was somewhat marred by a wrinkled coat and a collar that would not fit around his neck.

Edgar Hazleton, counsel for Mrs. Snyder, removed his overcoat and stepped forward to the side of the grilled bench.

He moved that the verdict be set aside and that a new trial be granted. He stated his grounds in an almost inaudible voice, and Mrs. Snyder, looking at him, obviously was unable to hear her attorney.

Justice Scudder, in tones that were almost kindly, overruled the motions.

He then pronounced the sentence.

Mrs. Snyder displayed no emotion, save that reflected in her tense muscles.

It was then Judd Gray's turn. His counsel, William Millard, made the same motions, which likewise were overruled.

Neither prisoner took advantage of the opportunity the state permits them to give any reason why the death penalty should not be exacted. Attorneys for both stepped up quickly and spoke in behalf of their clients when Justice Scudder went through the gesture outlined by statute.

After Gray had been sentenced, the prisoners and their guards made a lane through the crowd that had crept closer and closer as in Roman days the thongs clamored insistently to be "in at the death."

Ruth Snyder and Judd Gray were returned to their cells, with the promise that unless their sentences were altered htey should "sit in a chair and suffer electricity to pass through their bodies until their hearts no longer beat."

FRIDAY, MAY 13 IS SAD DAY FOR THIS CHICAGO MAN

Chicago, Friday, May Thirteenth—(UP)—Here's what today held for William Krelly, 35.

He was identified on the thirteenth of May as the man wanted for bombing a garage October thirteenth.

Then he was booked on thirteen different charges.

His identification came about because he gave the alias of William Nelson—thirteen letters—when he was arrested for speeding.

The policeman who arrested him also used thirteen letters in writing his name. It is William Neeseh.

TORNADO DEATH TOTAL IS 104 AT POPLAR BLUFF

ANOTHER BODY FOUND IN THE RUINS OF MELBOURNE HOTEL

MOST OF THE DEAD BURIED AT COMMUNITY SERVICE HELD

Poplar Bluff, Mo., May 13.—(UP)—Discovery of another body in the ruins of the Melbourne hotel here brought the death total of Monday's tornado to 104 today.

Most of the dead were to be buried this morning after a community service at which all churches will participate.

One hundred deputized citizens had taken the place of troops today. Under direction of the police commission, they patrolled the town, guarding carefully against looting.

A curfew rule was enforced last night.

The Red Cross reported the situation well in hand with sufficient tents and blankets to care for the homeless and food shortage no longer threatened.

NICARAGUAN REVOLT NEARS PEACEFUL END

Washington, May 13.—(UP)—One of the Nicaraguan revolutionary generals has refused to accept the agreement to turn over arms to the U. S. marines, Henry L. Stimson, President Coolidge's personal representative, reported to the state department today.

Stimson, however, has received a signed agreement from "Moncada and eleven generals including all his prominent chiefs, except Sandino," and therefore believes "this marks definitely the end of the insurrection," he reported.

Sandino has left Moncada with a small band of men, Stimson was informed.

Sir Douglas Hogg, attorney general, in charge of the bill for the government, announced the bill would be altered to make only ringleaders of illegal strikes punishable, instead of providing jail sentences for all participants. The bill prohibits general strikes and restricts the labor unions in various ways.

Labor members sang "The Red Flag" and the "Marseillaise" as the session dragged on through the night, and frequent demands that the government resign were shouted during divisions.

The only comment Tabor had to make following the wedding, was that he had married a "wonderful girl, what there is of her."

STILL COMMENT ON THE FATE OF 2 FRENCHMEN

SUPPOSITION ADVANCED THEY MAY HAVE LANDED IN LABRADOR

New York, May 13.—(UP)—The only suggestion of a clue to the fate of the French fliers who left Paris Sunday for New York, but have not been seen since they flew over Ireland between 10 and 11 o'clock Sunday morning, lay in reports that a half dozen persons at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, said they had heard the droning of an airplane's engines about 9:30 A. M. Monday. So far as could be learned, no plane flew over that region Monday morning unless it was the White Bird of the Frenchmen, and the report speeded the search along the coasts of Newfoundland and Nova Scotia.

Nungesser and Coli had expected to reach Nova Scotia before dawn Monday, but the bad weather in mid-Atlantic might have delayed them several hours.

Thorough search of the English Channel on the theory that the plane did not even reach Ireland failed to disclose a trace of it. Ships at sea reported no signs of the lost craft, and the slight hope for the safety of the aviators lay largely in the theory that they had reached the American coast and been forced down in some wilderness region where they could not communicate with civilization.

Washington, May 13.—With experts advancing a theory that Chas. Nungesser and Francois Coli may have turned over Labrador, the navy department today was hopeful the missing French aviators may be safe and that some word will come from them enabling their rescue.

If the fliers are in Labrador, however, weeks or even months may pass before they are able to make their way to civilization, the navy believes, pointing out that the country is wild and thinly populated.

The Labrador theory was evolved by two experts of the navy hydrographic office, Lieutenants Logan C. Ramsey and Earl H. Kinsaid, after a careful study of weather conditions, and was presented to Secretary of the Navy Wilbur. Their investigation disclosed that wind conditions along the route "were the very best that could be hoped for."

The theory is based on the assumption that the flight was not interrupted by engine trouble and that the course followed was the one mapped out at first. The weather report shows that the aviators would have struck a storm center moving northward across their course, and might either have been blown from their course or have turned north purposely to avoid the storm center. This would have carried them over Labrador.

In either of these cases, according to the experts' report, they would have encountered the coast of Labrador about midnight Sunday or shortly thereafter. If they did, they might have continued on until daylight and found themselves in an unknown country with peaks as high as 3,500 jutting up along the coastline. There are many lakes in the valleys, and the fliers may have landed on one of them—their best chance to escape death.

MRS. SNYDER AND GRAY TO BE ELECTROCUTED

TWO HEAR THE SENTENCES OF DEATH PASSED UPON THEM

AS PUNISHMENT FOR MURDER OF ALBERT SNYDER

By PAUL W. WHITE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Court Room, Long Island City, N. Y., Cay 13.—Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray stood before Justice Townsend Scudder today and heard the sentence of death passed upon them, as their punishment for the murder of Albert Snyder.

Justice Scudder ordered they be electrocuted at Sing Sing prison the week of June 20, 1927.

The suburban housewife and corset salesman, caught up in an illicit romance that shattered two homes, were straining and tense as Justice Scudder pronounced the doomsday words.

"You shall be put in solitary confinement at Sing Sing prison until the week of June twentieth at which time you shall be put to death as prescribed by law in this state," the justice slowly pronounced.

The expected outcries, such as condemned men and women sometimes cannot control as they face the forfeit the commonwealth demands, did not materialize.

There was suffering in Ruth Snyder's eyes and her head was bowed but she did not weep. Judd Gray's eyelids closed and his jaw quivered but the composure of the stoic little man survived the fateful sentence.

Both defendants will be spared the trip to the prison at Ossining until Monday. Although police motorcycles were stationed outside the courthouse, it was decided to postpone the journey.

All of the seats in the great court room, where twelve men listening to the evidence against the two and found them guilty of murder in the first degree after little more than an hour deliberation last Monday, were filled at 9:30 A. M. today, but the vast crowds of the trial were missing.

Two juries, trying minor felonies, were in the panel boxes and had front row seats for the sentencing of the country's most noted slayers.

It was exactly ten o'clock when Justice Scudder came to the bench, accompanied by Supreme Court Justice Carswell. Newspapermen pressed forward around the counsel table. The spectators stood.

Then came the prisoners.

Ruth Snyder, her hair freshly curled and blond tresses straying out from beneath her black, close fitting hat, appeared as though her night's sleep had been fitful.

But the woman, despite her mourning garb, was surprisingly fresh.

"There she is," the crowd whispered and pressed forward for a bette look at the woman. On such a grey day as this, Mrs. Snyder might have been doing the house work in her Queens village home, having seen her nine-year-old daughter Lorraine off to school, but instead she was before the bar of justice, with death near at hand.

Gray stood only three feet from his former mistress, but their eyes never met. His customary neatness was somewhat marred by a wrinkled coat and a collar that would not fit around his neck.

Edgar Hazleton, counsel for Mrs. Snyder, removed his overcoat and stepped forward to the side of the grilled bench.

He moved that the verdict be set aside and that a new trial be granted. He stated his grounds in an almost inaudible voice, and Mrs. Snyder, looking at him, obviously was unable to hear her attorney.

Justice Scudder, in tones that were almost kindly, overruled the motions.

He then pronounced the sentence.

Mrs. Snyder displayed no emotion, save that reflected in her tense muscles.

It was then Judd Gray's turn. His counsel, William Millard, made the same motions, which likewise were overruled.

Neither prisoner took advantage of the opportunity the state permits them to give any reason why the death penalty should not be exacted. Attorneys for both stepped up quickly and spoke in behalf of their clients when Justice Scudder went through the gesture outlined by statute.

After Gray had been sentenced, the prisoners and their guards made a lane through the crowd that had crept closer and closer as in Roman days the thongs clamored insistently to be "in at the death."

Ruth Snyder and Judd Gray were returned to their cells, with the promise that unless their sentences were altered htey should "sit in a chair and suffer electricity to pass through their bodies until their hearts no longer beat."

FRIDAY, MAY 13 IS SAD DAY FOR THIS CHICAGO MAN

Chicago, Friday, May Thirteenth —(UP)—Here's what today held for William Krelly, 35.

He was identified on the thirteenth of May as the man wanted for bombing a garage October thirteenth.

Then he was booked on thirteen different charges.

His identification came about because he gave the alias of William Nelson—thirteen letters—when he was arrested for speeding.

The policeman who arrested him also used thirteen letters in writing his name. It is William Neeseh.

ANOTHER BODY FOUND IN THE RUINS OF MELBOURNE HOTEL

MOST OF THE DEAD BURIED AT COMMUNITY SERVICE HELD

Poplar Bluff, Mo., May 13.—(UP) —Discovery of another body in the ruins of the Melbourne hotel here brought the death total of Monday's tornado to 104 today.

Most of the dead were to be buried this morning after a community service at which all churches will participate.

One hundred deputized citizens had taken the place of troops today. Under direction of the police commission, they patrolled the town, guarding carefully against looting.

A curfew rule was enforced last night.

The Red Cross reported the situation well in hand with sufficient tents and blankets to care for the homeless and food shortage no longer threatened.

NICARAGUAN REVOLT NEARS PEACEFUL END

Washington, May 13.—(UP)—One of the Nicaraguan revolutionary generals has refused to accept the agreement to turn over arms to the U. S. marines, Henry L. Stimson, President Coolidge's personal representative, reported to the state department today.

Stimson, however, has received a signed agreement from "Moncada and eleven generals including all his prominent chiefs, except Sandino," and therefore believes "this marks definitely the end of the insurrection," he reported.

Sandino has left Moncada with a small band of men, Stimson was informed.

LIBERTY LOAN PAYMENTS

Secretary Mellon Calls for Payment on Second Loan Bonds

Holders of Second Liberty Loan bonds in Brainerd are requested to take notice that Secretary Mellon has called for payment on November 15, 1927, all outstanding Second Liberty bonds. Interest on these bonds will cease at that time. Approximately $1,700,000,000 of these bonds are now outstanding.

While the bonds will be paid on November 15, 1927, it is quite probable that during the next six months the Treasury will extend to the holders of the Second Liberty Loan bonds an opportunity to exchange them for other Government securities. No announcement has as yet been made as to the type of security to be offered in exchange, or the date on which the exchange offer may be expected. The Treasury explains that the terms of the bonds require that a notice be given to the public six months in advance of the redemptions date. The Secretary's announcement, therefore, does not mean that the bonds will be paid at the present time, but merely places the holders on notice that their bonds will be redeemed on November 15, and will cease to bear interest on that date.

If holders of Second Liberties desire to have their bonds redeemed, they should present them for payment on November 15, 1927, but if they desire other Government obligations in place of their Seconds, they should watch for further announcement and notify their bank to keep them informed of any exchange offering that may later be made by the Treasury.

Blondes, Brunettes 'N Trouble at the Lyceum

The controversy regarding a gentleman's preference is fed with the fuel of mirth by this saucy, farce, ably directed by Richard Rosson and enacted by a supporting cast commensurate with the star's skill and importance.

Rin-Tin-Tin in "The Night Cry"

Picture audiences who saw Rin-Tin-Tin in "Tracked in the Snow Country," "Below the Line," and "The Clash of the Wolves," will expect his latest picture to live up to the high standard of his previous successes.

Rinty surpasses even these remarkable characterizations in "The Night Cry," which shows Saturday at the Lyceum theatre, and which is a thrilling story of a California sheep ranch.

LIBERTY LOAN PAYMENTS

Secretary Mellon Calls for Payment on Second Loan Bonds

Holders of Second Liberty Loan bonds in Brainerd are requested to take notice that Secretary Mellon has called for payment on November 15, 1927, all outstanding Second Liberty bonds. Interest on these bonds will cease at that time. Approximately $1,700,000,000 of these bonds are now outstanding.

While the bonds will be paid on November 15, 1927, it is quite probable that during the next six months the Treasury will extend to the holders of the Second Liberty Loan bonds an opportunity to exchange them for other Government securities. No announcement has as yet been made as to the type of security to be offered in exchange, or the date on which the exchange offer may be expected. The Treasury explains that the terms of the bonds require that a notice be given to the public six months in advance of the redemptions date. The Secretary's announcement, therefore, does not mean that the bonds will be paid at the present time, but merely places the holders on notice that their bonds will be redeemed on November 15, and will cease to bear interest on that date.

If holders of Second Liberties desire to have their bonds redeemed, they should present them for payment on November 15, 1927, but if they desire other Government obligations in place of their Seconds, they should watch for further announcement and notify their bank to keep them informed of any exchange offering that may later be made by the Treasury.

Blondes, Brunettes 'N Trouble at the Lyceum

The controversy regarding a gentleman's preference is fed with the fuel of mirth by this saucy, farce, ably directed by Richard Rosson and enacted by a supporting cast commensurate with the star's skill and importance.

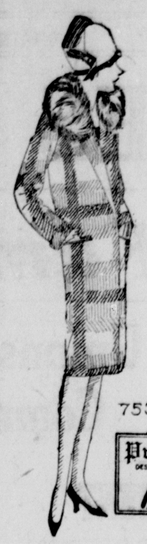

Rin-Tin-Tin in "The Night Cry"

Picture audiences who saw Rin-Tin-Tin in "Tracked in the Snow Country," "Below the Line," and "The Clash of the Wolves," will expect his latest picture to live up to the high standard of his previous successes.

Rinty surpasses even these remarkable characterizations in "The Night Cry," which shows Saturday at the Lyceum theatre, and which is a thrilling story of a California sheep ranch.

We Just PAINTED the Living Room

You might not believe it but that room was once dark and gloomy. None of us ever wanted to stay there long. Then we consulted Alderman-Maghan who explained it was the fault of the wall colorings, the floors and the woodwork. Nothing wrong with the room itself.

And so we went ahead to see what we could do. What a transformation! Now it is the most charming room in the entire house. I am going to do over the bedroom with Blood's Decotone flat wall paint too.

STATEHOOD DAY WAS OBSERVED BY PIONEERS

69TH BIRTHDAY OF MINNESOTA GIVEN REAL CELEBRATION

SCORES OF PIONEERS PARTICIPATE IN EXERCISES AT STATE CAPITOL

St. Paul, May 13.—(UP)—Statehood Day was observed in all parts of the state Wednesday by pioneers who helped to develop history in Minnesota. The 69th birthday of Minnesota was given its greatest celebration at the state capitol here with scores of pioneers participating.

Intermingled with the early settlers were youngsters of this generation who were accompanying the grand-parents.

Samuel R. Van Sant, former governor and president of the Minnesota Territorial Pioneers' Association, was among those who first came to this section of the country despite pessimistic reports in the east, concerning the possibilities for advancement of what is now Minnesota.

Tales of early adventures and hardships were passed about the halls of the state capitol by persons who had experienced the difficulties of overcoming obstacles in the path of progress.

Former Governor Van Sant was one of those who had a few experiences to talk about. He is 83 years old and would have walked the 10-mile stretch from his home to the capital if his family had not interfered. He complied by riding in an automobile after considering the fact that he is 14 years older than the state. It was the first time in several years that he has not walked to the annual gathering.

During his discourse the former governor touched upon his election to that position.

"Albinas Nance and myself both attended Knox College in Illnois," he said, "and also served together in the civil war in the 9th Illinois Cavalry. Later he was elected governor of Nebraska and I became governor of Minnesota."

The pioneers met at 10 A. M. and attended a dinner party at noon under the auspices of the Garfield Relief Corps of the G. A. R.

The afternoon session was devoted to further discussions of pioneer life and organization of the Territorial Guild for the purpose of preserving accounts of early life and handiwork of Minnesota pioneers.

The celebration ended last night with an illustrated lecture on life of the early settlers in this state by Dr. Solon J. Buck, superintendent of the Minnesota Historical Society.

BRAINERD GAINS GOLF PUBLICITY

WE have on our desk today the first issue of Captain William H. Fawcett's new golf magazine, "The 10,000 Lakes Golfer and Outdoor Magazine." It covers the field in comprehensive manner and we are especially pleased to see the prominence accorded golf news from Brainerd.

The lead editorial of the new Fawcett magazine states that everywhere the game of golf has made tremendous strides in popularity, but nowhere has its growth been so marked nor so promising as in this particular locality (this section of the Northwest). With the forty-five or fifty clubs which surround the Twin Cities as a nucleus, there is scarcely a community in the states of Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Wisconsin, and Iowa which does not boast one or more excellent links. And the present year promises to outstrip all others in the rapidity with which new courses are being laid out and new clubs organized.

"But in spite of this amazing growth in the popularity of the game, those who are its most ardent fans have never been served by a strictly sectional golf magazine. In almost every other part of the country such publications already have to their credit a goodly number of years of successful activity in catering to the tastes and interests of the fans and players in their particular localities. That such a field is at hand here in the ten thousand lakes region has been made amply evident by the immediate and enthusiastic response we have received wherever mention of The 10,000 Lakes Golfer and Outdoor Magazine has been made."

"This summer particularly the citizens of golfdom will be made aware of the vacation facilities of this section. With the advent of the National Amateur Tournament, hundreds of fans will flock to witness what has become the blue ribbon event of American golf competition. Many of these people will be here for the first time. If by advertising the ten thousand lakes region this publication can secure the favorable attention of these newcomers to the splendid vacation facilities of this section, it will indeed be of service."

Listed under 1927's Northwest Tournaments are the Tourists Tournaments of the Brainerd Country club July 31 and August 28, and the Ten Thousand Lakes men's and women's tournaments at Breezy Point Lodge on August 12 to 14. Under news from the North, are reviewed golf activities planned for Bemidji, Brainerd, Breezy Point, Duluth, Alexandria and Hibbing.

BRING HONOR TO BRAINERD

WE note with extreme pleasure that the members of the Brainerd Musical club choral section won first honors in the singing contest held at the Sixth District Minnesota Federation of Women's clubs convention.

All St. Paul and Minneapolis papers commented on the performance and noted that winning first place in the district contest brings with it the honor of representing the sixth district in the state-wide choral contest to be held at the annual meeting of the State Federation in October at Crookston.

Will a Brainerd Girl Arise to Movie Stardom in This City?

Has Sinclair Lewis a counterpart in a Brainerd person?

Will some aspiring young writer from this city follow to the screen the now world-famous author who in a small Minnesota town nursed a talent that was to give him rank among the great writers and who was to see his works used with remarkable success on the screen?

Will a Brainerd girl rise to movie stardom through the story of this Brainerd writer in the same glorious manner that Clara Bow, the pretty little actress of the screen, startled film fans with her marvelous portrayal in Sinclair Lewis' "Mantrap."

Soon will be announced in this newspaper the winner of the $10 cash prize for the writer of the scenario that will be used in the making of the motion picture whose interior scenes will be "shot" upon the stage of the Park theatre shortly.

Probably no other event in years in Brainerd and the country has created the talk and enthusiasm that has greeted the Brainerd Dispatch Movie Contest. The project has given all residents of this city and vicinity the opportunity to compete for participation in a field of endeavor that has always held a fascination for all.

A short time still remains before the scenario contest closes. Your last minute inspiration may win for you the $10 prize and the fame that goes with it. Future motion picture stars, register your names at once. The camera will soon start grinding.

W. E. Stickney has sold his home on Third Avenue and is moving into John Martin's house on Fourth Avenue. Mr. Martin is moving his family to St. Paul to remain indefinitely.

Brainerd's building boom this summer will be the largest in the history of the city. Houses are going up in almost every ward of the city by the dozens and many other improvements are announced.

E. C. Bane has let a contract for the erection of a solid fire proof block on his lot on South Seventh street, adjoining the lot on which Messrs. Opsahl and Patek are now building. The building will be two stories high and will be 50 by 100 feet, modern in every particular and will be erected for store purposes.

Eagle Hose Co. No. 4 elected the following delegates to the state firemen's convention last night. Arthur Hastings, and Ira C. White, alternates, Peter Christianson and John Thompson.

Dr. K. H. Hoorn has arrived in the city from Red Wing and has opened dental parlors in the Columbian block.

A bright baby girl was born to Mr. and Mrs. Marion Spencer last evening.

VANCE GOT 3 SINGLES AND DOUBLE IN 4 TIMES AT BAT

BROOKLYN DEFEATS CINCINNATI BY SCORE OF 6 TO 3

By UNITED PRESS

Yesterday's hero — Dazzy Vance, Brooklyn pitcher, allowed only four hits in a game with Cincinnati and recorded a batting average of 1.000. Vance got three singles and a double in four times at bat. Each of the four Cincinnati hits was a double, however, and the reds were able to score three runs in spite of their failure to hit often. It made little difference to Vance, however, as Brooklyn won, 6 to 3.

Rallies which gave Philadelphia three runs in both the eighth and ninth innings couldn't overcome the Detroit Tigers' lead and the latter won 9 to 7. Detroit did most of its scoring in the fourth when six runs crossed the plate. Ty Cobb got a double for Philadelphia and scored a run.

Late inning batting of the St. Louis Browns fell short and the Yankees added another game to their lead in the American league. The score was New York 4; St. Louis 3. Babe Ruth got a single and a double in four times at bat.

Bunching hits and a home run by Stephenson gave the Chicago Cubs victory over Philadelphia 4 to 1. Jim Wilson, Phillies catcher, was ordered to leave the game in the second inning when Umpire Hart ruled the catcher had not tagged Stephenson who was coming into home with the second run of the round.

It took eleven innings of tight ball playing for the Giants to win from the St. Louis Cardinals 3 to 2. Alexander and Grimes participated in the pitching duel. Douthit hit a home run.

Although they outslugged the Pittsburgh Pirates by a narrow margin, the Boston Braves lost 8 to 7. The Pirates scored half of their runs in the fourth and the seventh was the Braves' lucky inning when they counted five times.

Washington's three-run lead in the first inning didn't discourage Ted Blankenship of the Chicago White Sox and he pitched his team to a 5 to 4 vitcory. Judge hit a home run. "Firpo" Marberry pitched for the Senators.

St. Paul — The lowly Columbus Senators took another game from the Saints, 6 to 3. Columbus bunched hits in the seventh for three of the six scores.

Kansas City—Scoring three runs in the tenth, Louisville broke a tie and beat Kansas City 6 to 3.

Minneapolis — Lebourveau maintained his unbroken batting record by hitting safely for the 21st consecutive game but the Toledo Hens were beaten 9 to 5 by the Millers

Milwaukee—Ruthless slugging in the early innings made a wild game of the Indianapolis-Milwaukee contest which ended in victory for the Indians, 13 to 10. Indianapolis got six runs in the first and Milwaukee duplicated the performance in the third.

COMMENTS ON BABE RUTH

RUPPERT SIGNED HIM 3 YEARS FOR $70,000 PER

WILL THE BAMBINO BE A BUST OR CONTINUE TO BE ATTRACTION

NO VALEDICTORY FOR RUTH, HE IS NOT THROUGH FOR A LONG TIME

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, May 13.—When Col. Jake Ruppert obligated himself to the music of $210,000 to keep Babe Ruth with the New York Yankees for three more years his competitors among the magnates questioned his baseball sagacity.

His sagacity has been questioned previously but the answer always turned out right for him. He was looked upon as a poor lamb straying from his natural fold when he went in with Capt. Huston and bought the New York Yankees, whose assets were chiefly a trunk full of soiled uniforms. Again his friends offered him sympathy when he and his partner paid the Boston Red Sox $100,000 for Babe Ruth. But the investment in the Yankee franchise and in the Babe resulted in immense profits.

Against all arguments offered that $210,000 was too much to guarantee a ball player who might crack at any moment and not be worth a dime, the colonel signed the Babe for three years at $70,000 per.

The Yankee owner felt that he made a good business deal. The Babe came to him asking for $150,000 on a one-year contract. If he had given Ruth that $150,000 and Ruth played his normal game all season, Ruppert would have been forced to pay him even more on a new contract next year. If the Babe got only $100,000 for this year and $100,000 for next year, the Yankees would have put out $200,000 for two years. But the deal Ruppert made tied the Babe to the club for three years for $210,000. It looks like a smart deal.

Suppose, you might offer, the Babe blows up this year. It's a gamble, of course—and the answer is, suppose he doesn't blow up?

The time must come, of course, when the Babe will be through but his passing will not bankrupt the club because the Yankees have, at the cost of a lot of money, built up a real club that will go on winning.

Right now they have a young first baseman, Buster Gehrig, who would be the reigning sensation of baseball if he wasn't forced to play second fiddle to the big bass of the Babe.

There are many baseball men who think that in another year Gehrig will be playing right up to the Babe, as he is almost doing now. He never will have the showmanship of the Babe, of course, but the Yankee stadium is a memorial to the appeal that a socker has to the fans, and Gehrig is a socker.

THE extra mileage you get from Dunlop tires starts with the fact that Dunlop has had thirty-nine years of tire-building experience—more than any other tire-maker.

Each part of each Dunlop is built right. Dunlop owns its own cotton mills to spin selected long-fibre cotton into the special Dunlop cable-twist cords.

These cords mean extra strength—an added factor of safety against constant load and pounding of roads—longer life and greater mileage.

They mean extra "stretch"—so the tire carcass will give under blows, and come back to its original shape without the slightest injury.

DAZZY VANCE SHINES AT BAT AND BOX

ALLOWS ONLY FOUR HITS AND BATS 1000 PCT.

VANCE GOT 3 SINGLES AND DOUBLE IN 4 TIMES AT BAT

BROOKLYN DEFEATS CINCINNATI BY SCORE OF 6 TO 3

By UNITED PRESS

Yesterday's hero — Dazzy Vance, Brooklyn pitcher, allowed only four hits in a game with Cincinnati and recorded a batting average of 1.000. Vance got three singles and a double in four times at bat. Each of the four Cincinnati hits was a double, however, and the reds were able to score three runs in spite of their failure to hit often. It made little difference to Vance, however, as Brooklyn won, 6 to 3.

Rallies which gave Philadelphia three runs in both the eighth and ninth innings couldn't overcome the Detroit Tigers' lead and the latter won 9 to 7. Detroit did most of its scoring in the fourth when six runs crossed the plate. Ty Cobb got a double for Philadelphia and scored a run.

Late inning batting of the St. Louis Browns fell short and the Yankees added another game to their lead in the American league. The score was New York 4; St. Louis 3. Babe Ruth got a single and a double in four times at bat.

Bunching hits and a home run by Stephenson gave the Chicago Cubs victory over Philadelphia 4 to 1. Jim Wilson, Phillies catcher, was ordered to leave the game in the second inning when Umpire Hart ruled the catcher had not tagged Stephenson who was coming into home with the second run of the round.

It took eleven innings of tight ball playing for the Giants to win from the St. Louis Cardinals 3 to 2. Alexander and Grimes participated in the pitching duel. Douthit hit a home run.

Although they outslugged the Pittsburgh Pirates by a narrow margin, the Boston Braves lost 8 to 7. The Pirates scored half of their runs in the fourth and the seventh was the Braves' lucky inning when they counted five times.

Washington's three-run lead in the first inning didn't discourage Ted Blankenship of the Chicago White Sox and he pitched his team to a 5 to 4 vitcory. Judge hit a home run. "Firpo" Marberry pitched for the Senators.

St. Paul — The lowly Columbus Senators took another game from the Saints, 6 to 3. Columbus bunched hits in the seventh for three of the six scores.

Kansas City—Scoring three runs in the tenth, Louisville broke a tie and beat Kansas City 6 to 3.

Minneapolis — Lebourveau maintained his unbroken batting record by hitting safely for the 21st consecutive game but the Toledo Hens were beaten 9 to 5 by the Millers

Milwaukee—Ruthless slugging in the early innings made a wild game of the Indianapolis-Milwaukee contest which ended in victory for the Indians, 13 to 10. Indianapolis got six runs in the first and Milwaukee duplicated the performance in the third.

COMMENTS ON BABE RUTH

RUPPERT SIGNED HIM 3 YEARS FOR $70,000 PER

WILL THE BAMBINO BE A BUST OR CONTINUE TO BE ATTRACTION

NO VALEDICTORY FOR RUTH, HE IS NOT THROUGH FOR A LONG TIME

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, May 13.—When Col. Jake Ruppert obligated himself to the music of $210,000 to keep Babe Ruth with the New York Yankees for three more years his competitors among the magnates questioned his baseball sagacity.

His sagacity has been questioned previously but the answer always turned out right for him. He was looked upon as a poor lamb straying from his natural fold when he went in with Capt. Huston and bought the New York Yankees, whose assets were chiefly a trunk full of soiled uniforms. Again his friends offered him sympathy when he and his partner paid the Boston Red Sox $100,000 for Babe Ruth. But the investment in the Yankee franchise and in the Babe resulted in immense profits.

Against all arguments offered that $210,000 was too much to guarantee a ball player who might crack at any moment and not be worth a dime, the colonel signed the Babe for three years at $70,000 per.

The Yankee owner felt that he made a good business deal. The Babe came to him asking for $150,000 on a one-year contract. If he had given Ruth that $150,000 and Ruth played his normal game all season, Ruppert would have been forced to pay him even more on a new contract next year. If the Babe got only $100,000 for this year and $100,000 for next year, the Yankees would have put out $200,000 for two years. But the deal Ruppert made tied the Babe to the club for three years for $210,000. It looks like a smart deal.

Suppose, you might offer, the Babe blows up this year. It's a gamble, of course—and the answer is, suppose he doesn't blow up?

The time must come, of course, when the Babe will be through but his passing will not bankrupt the club because the Yankees have, at the cost of a lot of money, built up a ball club that will go on winning.

Right now they have a young first baseman, Buster Gehrig, who would be the reigning sensation of baseball if he wasn't forced to play second fiddle to the big bass of the Babe.

There are many baseball men who think that in another year Gehrig will be playing right up to the Babe, as he is almost doing now. He never will have the showmanship of the Babe, of course, but the Yankee stadium is a memorial to the appeal that a socker has to the fans, and Gehrig is a socker.

LADY MISSING 40 HOURS LOCATED

Mrs. John A. Benson Telephones Relatives From Farm at 1:15 P. M. Today

IN HYSTERICAL CONDITION

Searching Parties Who Have Scoured County Have Been Called In

Mrs. Katharine Benson, wife of John A. Benson, 704 South Norwood street, who had been lost some 40 hours at 1:15 p. m. today telephoned from the farm of Andrew Erickson, three miles east of Brainerd to the home of her sister, Mrs. Peter Rosko, South Seventh street, notifying her of her wherabouts.

A party in an automobile immediately set out and met her on the Oak street road walking to Brainerd. Mrs. Benson stepped into the car without assistance and was taken immediately to her relatives in Brainerd.

Arriving at the home of her sister she was found to have a high temperature and in addition became hysterical. Information which she gave out at times indicates that when she left her home Wednesday night she hid in a hollow near South Broadway and then walked in an easterly direction until late the next day, covering about 40 miles and traversing wide swamp land. She then faced about towards Brainerd and late last night found an old house in the woods. In one of the rooms of this deserted place she found an old mattress and slept on it and thus found shelter from the storm which raged last night.

Police of the city on being notified of her return immediately endeavored to give the news to the various searching parties and to call them in.

Disappeared Wednesday

Suffering from a nervous breakdown Wednesday evening she had crept from a window on the lower floor of the residence shortly after she had been playing the piano. Her sister, Mrs. A. E. Allen noticed her absence a few moments after she had left and gave immediate alarm. Since that hour, 9:30 p. m. of Wednesday night, constant search has been made by relatives, police and sheriff departments, fire department, shop men and other volunteers.

Sheriff Claus Theorin sent out descriptions in all directions and the authorities of all towns in a radius of fifty miles from Brainerd were scanning all strangers.

Late yesterday afternoon a report was received by Sheriff Theorin that the Smith boys on the Betzold place at the extreme south end of Sixth street had seen her in the woods, bareheaded, and wearing a similar description of clothes, but it turned out to be a case of mistaken identity.

All last night searchers threshed through the woods and fields at the south end of Sixth street along the banks of the little stream and on the shores of Boom Lake.

A report received from the pumping station was to the effect that footprints about the rear door and around the reservoir indicated some person had walked in that vicinity Wednesday night and may have been the missing woman. Men at the station were instructed to give all possible aid and notify the police in case she was seen in that vicinity Thursday night.

On Wednesday night the thermometer ranged down to 35 degrees. She was very lightly clad, wore no coat or hat and her feet had only the light covering afforded by oxfords.

The Betzold gravel pit was searched from end to end. Houses, barns, and vacant buildings were examined by the neighbors.

At 3 o'clock this morning a large searching party again combed the woods and fields south of Brainerd. Many shopmen laid off today, forming other parties searching for the woman. WCCO this morning broadcasted her disappearance and all city papers, Duluth, St. Paul and Minneapolis carried descriptions.

Much relief is felt over Mrs. Benson's safe return.

JOINT MEETING OF P. T. A. HELD

One of Largest Gatherings in Records of the Various Associations

MUSIC DEMONSTRATION

Speakers Included Dr. A. K. Cohen and Rev. Robert J. Long of Episcopal Church

Over 250 people attended the joint meeting of the Parent Teacher's associations, Tuesday evening in the high school assembly, making it one of the largest meetings on record.

The high school orchestra opened the program with several well rendered selections under the direction of Miss Cora Rickard, music supervisor.

Dr. A. K. Cohen, made an appeal for the "human flag" a new idea that is being developed throughout the country. Sixty-three people forming a flag staff, field, thirteen stripes and 48 stars, form a human flag, and a certain sum of money given by these people is sent in to the National Flag association of which President Coolidge is the honorary president. The interest derived from the money will be used to instruct new citizens regarding the use of the flag and to spread the meaning and ideals of the flag to the people as a whole throughout the country.

Rev. Robert J. Long, the speaker of the evening, gave an interesting talk on vocational training.

Miss Rickard gave an educational music demonstration, using pupils from the various grades to high school students to demonstrate her various methods.

Reports were made by the various associations as to what they had accomplished during the past year. A lunch was served in the Domestic Science rooms after the meeting.

Included in the cast were:

Baptista—Wayne Curtis.
Lucentio—Verne McNamara.
Petruchio—John Fisher.
Katherina, the Shrew—Rose Koering.
Bianca—Viola McKay.
Tailor—Toivo Bikkie.
Haberdasher—Allen Johnson.

Miss Katherine Staub did very well in reading the introduction as did Miss Marguerite O'Brien in explaining the scenes.

A drill given by a group of 12 girls was beautifully executed. The girls included the Misses Mary Larkin, Dorothy Fox, Margaret Anderson, Sylvia Swanson, Wilma Helgeson, Esther Gallagher, Ardelle Persson, Hazel Perrson, Ethel Finne, Jeanette Schnell, Edith Titus, Fayma Brotherson. Miss Edith Heald played the accompaniments.

Readings were given by Kathryn Allbright, Helen Marie Stadlbauer, and Helen Paine. Solos were given by Alta Storm, Julius Peterson and Victor Bourgeois. Miss Celeste Johnson gave a most delightful piano solo and was made to respond with an encore by the enthusiastic demands of the audience.

LADY MISSING 40 HOURS LOCATED

Mrs. John A. Benson Telephones Relatives From Farm at 1:15 P. M. Today

IN HYSTERICAL CONDITION

Searching Parties Who Have Scoured County Have Been Called In

Mrs. Katharine Benson, wife of John A. Benson, 704 South Norwood street, who had been lost some 40 hours at 1:15 p. m. today telephoned from the farm of Andrew Erickson, three miles east of Brainerd to the home of her sister, Mrs. Peter Rosko, South Seventh street, notifying her of her wherabouts.

A party in an automobile immediately set out and met her on the Oak street road walking to Brainerd. Mrs. Benson stepped into the car without assistance and was taken immediately to her relatives in Brainerd.

Arriving at the home of her sister she was found to have a high temperature and in addition became hysterical. Information which she gave out at times indicates that when she left her home Wednesday night she hid in a hollow near South Broadway and then walked in an easterly direction until late the next day, covering about 40 miles and traversing wide swamp land. She then faced about towards Brainerd and late last night found an old house in the woods. In one of the rooms of this deserted place she found an old mattress and slept on it and thus found shelter from the storm which raged last night.

Police of the city on being notified of her return immediately endeavored to give the news to the various searching parties and to call them in.

Disappeared Wednesday

Suffering from a nervous breakdown Wednesday evening she had crept from a window on the lower floor of the residence shortly after she had been playing the piano. Her sister, Mrs. A. E. Allen noticed her absence a few moments after she had left and gave immediate alarm. Since that hour, 9:30 p. m. of Wednesday night, constant search has been made by relatives, police and sheriff departments, fire department, shop men and other volunteers.

Sheriff Claus Theorin sent out descriptions in all directions and the authorities of all towns in a radius of fifty miles from Brainerd were scanning all strangers.

Late yesterday afternoon a report was received by Sheriff Theorin that the Smith boys on the Betzold place at the extreme south end of Sixth street had seen her in the woods, bareheaded, and wearing a similar description of clothes, but it turned out to be a case of mistaken identity.

All last night searchers threshed through the woods and fields at the south end of Sixth street along the banks of the little stream and on the shores of Boom Lake.

A report received from the pumping station was to the effect that footprints about the rear door and around the reservoir indicated some person had walked in that vicinity Wednesday night and may have been the missing woman. Men at the station were instructed to give all possible aid and notify the police in case she was seen in that vicinity Thursday night.

On Wednesday night the thermometer ranged down to 35 degrees. She was very lightly clad, wore no coat or hat and her feet had only the light covering afforded by oxfords.

The Betzold gravel pit was searched from end to end. Houses, barns, and vacant buildings were examined by the neighbors.

At 3 o'clock this morning a large searching party again combed the woods and fields south of Brainerd. Many shopmen laid off today, forming other parties searching for the woman. WCCO this morning broadcasted her disappearance and all city papers, Duluth, St. Paul and Minneapolis carried descriptions.

Much relief is felt over Mrs. Benson's safe return.

JOINT MEETING OF P. T. A. HELD

MUSIC DEMONSTRATION

Speakers Included Dr. A. K. Cohen and Rev. Robert J. Long of Episcopal Church

Over 250 people attended the joint meeting of the Parent Teacher's associations, Tuesday evening in the high school assembly, making it one of the largest meetings on record.

The high school orchestra opened the program with several well rendered selections under the direction of Miss Cora Rickard, music supervisor.

Dr. A. K. Cohen, made an appeal for the "human flag" a new idea that is being developed throughout the country. Sixty-three people forming a flag staff, field, thirteen stripes and 48 stars, form a human flag, and a certain sum of money given by these people is sent in to the National Flag association of which President Coolidge is the honorary president. The interest derived from the money will be used to instruct new citizens regarding the use of the flag and to spread the meaning and ideals of the flag to the people as a whole throughout the country.

Rev. Robert J. Long, the speaker of the evening, gave an interesting talk on vocational training.

Miss Rickard gave an educational music demonstration, using pupils from the various grades to high school students to demonstrate her various methods.

Reports were made by the various associations as to what they had accomplished during the past year. A lunch was served in the Domestic Science rooms after the meeting.

Included in the cast were:

Baptista—Wayne Curtis.
Lucentio—Verne McNamara.
Petruchio—John Fisher.
Katherina, the Shrew—Rose Koering.
Bianca—Viola McKay.
Tailor—Toivo Bikkie.
Haberdasher—Allen Johnson.

Miss Katherine Staub did very well in reading the introduction as did Miss Marguerite O'Brien in explaining the scenes.

A drill given by a group of 12 girls was beautifully executed. The girls included the Misses Mary Larkin, Dorothy Fox, Margaret Anderson, Sylvia Swanson, Wilma Helgeson, Esther Gallagher, Ardelle Persson, Hazel Perrson, Ethel Finne, Jeanette Schnell, Edith Titus, Fayma Brotherson. Miss Edith Heald played the accompaniments.

Readings were given by Kathryn Allbright, Helen Marie Stadlbauer, and Helen Paine. Solos were given by Alta Storm, Julius Peterson and Victor Bourgeois. Miss Celeste Johnson gave a most delightful piano solo and was made to respond with an encore by the enthusiastic demands of the audience.

THE STORY SO FAR

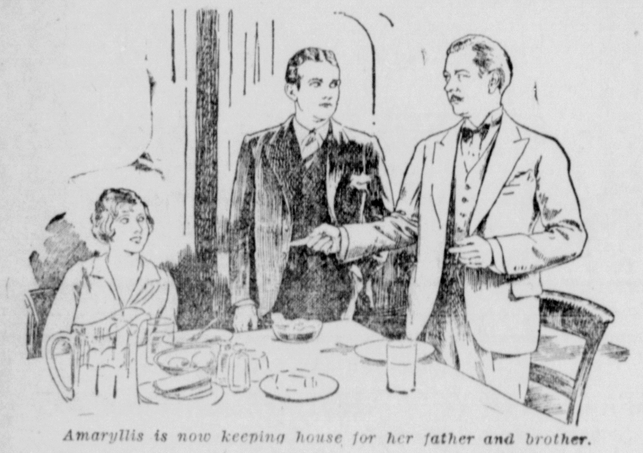

Amaryllis, neglected by her parents, runs away and finds happiness with John Guido in "The Magic Garden." Although after this her father is ideal, and she learns to love him, she never forgets this one day of her childhood, and when a big girl, her father learns that the Forresters have gone to Italy, so he offers to rent the "Magic Garden" for her. Amaryllis, who has never forgotten John Guido, is delighted.

"Amaryllis," he said, "I've given away Forrester pictures until I haven't got a friend who has not one somewhere in his house. There is this to say about them. They are good paintings. I don't know a landscape artist in this country, or in Europe either, of the present day who can beat him. He hasn't got a nice temper and he hasn't very nice manners, but he can paint!"

Then Amaryllis said something else, and what she said was this: "Father, Mr. Forrester has had a long time to think things over. Maybe he is nicer now than he was. Just look what a difference there is in you. He couldn't know you now without thinking you are a lot nicer than you used to be."

Paul Minton laughed and said: "Yes, Amaryllis, I guess that is the truth. I think you have worked Love's alchemy on me as well as you have on John Guido and his father."

After that there was not any way for Amaryllis to be half so nice a girl as she wanted to be. Because her heart was so very full of love, and high hopes, and youth, she made something entirely different out of Peter, too. He did not turn his back and look from the window any more when she talked to him. He came over and sat on her chair-arm and put his arms across her shoulder. They had fine times riding their horses and playing all sorts of games.

Amaryllis is now keeping house for her father and brother.

Religiously Amaryllis tried to think for her father and for Peter. She tried to take the place that her mother should have filled. When she had done everything she could think of to do for her family, then she was free to slip to the telephone and call the architect who served her and tell him something more that she wanted done to the little house. She kept on thinking of things every time she went there, until by and by, along about the time that there was talk of taking her abroad for the first time, a very wonderful thing happened to the little house and the thirty acres of extremely valuable land that surrounded it.

Amaryllis—once the poor little rich girl left to the mercy of servants—is happy now keeping house for her father and brother. But one thing is lacking. She misses John Guido, the boy she met by the Roaring Brook when as a little girl she ran away from home. However, there is hope that he will some day return to the little house of happy memories and meanwhile Amaryllis is allowed by her indulgent father to spend time and money renovating that house to prepare for his home-coming.

The house itself had been repaired and bolstered up and helped out until it was practically splinter-new so far as being upstanding and reliable was concerned. It had shiny waxed floors. It had beautiful woodwork. It had softly tinted walls. It had the same furnishings that always had been in it and here and there new and different pieces had crept in. One thing had happened that was entirely different. On the right corner in the right light there had grown up the most wonderful studio for a painter that three of the greatest architects in the big city could think up. The plans that all of them made for what they would like to have if they had the money for it were taken and shaken together and made into a studio for a painter that had every single thing in it, every comfort and convenience and quirk of lighting that could possibly be designed. That was for John Forrester.

Over at another side there crept on another room that had not been in the little house before and that room was the loveliest room that Amaryllis could think up with some very able assistance from people who knew about the kinds of rooms that musicians liked. It was a room with walls of the softest, most delicate green like spring coming to the willows and the apple trees; a room with woodwork stained the softest grey. The grain of the wood showed through. Soft rugs of grey with a little bit of green, and beautiful chairs and tables and a great piano, a perfect piano, waited for John Guido.

One other thing happened after all the weeds had been taken away and every tree had had all the dead wood cut from it and all its cavities filled and there was not a thing left that possibly could be done to make that thirty acres more beautiful than it was—the very last thing of all that love could suggest to the heart of Amaryllis was an order that came from a lily field in the South. The garden was a flame of them. Of course they had to be housed in winter and reset in the spring, but no one cared.

There was one thing more that happened in the garden. Only one thing that was any different. Where the one red Amaryllis had been set, a space perhaps the size of a large room was cleared. Away down deep it began with cement and crushed rock foundation and came up a little above the surface and ended with a paving of white marble. A wall ran up at the back the length of it that gleamed white in the moonlight, white as the shimmeriest star high up in the heavens, and a great big urn, of white marble, all carved with doves and Cupids racing with garlands and flying ribbons, and fawns running away from the Cupids, crowned the center. And in this wonderful urn big bulbs of red Amaryllis were set each spring and fertilized, watered and tended until they lifted up great heads of red velvet lily flowers.

Sometimes on moonlight nights when nobody in all the house could find Amaryllis, if they had gone to the little garden beside the roaring brook, they would have found her on this marble floor all in a soft white dress—plain and simple, not much of a dress, chiffons that lifted and floated and carried on the night air, white as the whitest ray of moonlight. They would have found Amaryllis with her yellow hair unbound and her blue eyes either on the lilies or the stars. No one could have watched her long without knowing that what she was dancing as she tiptoed and whirled and floated over that marble floor was just Amaryllis, Amaryllis as the black-eyed boy had played it.

Once Paul Minton got started at being the kind of father that every man was intended to be, he resorted to no halfway measures. So, because there was this great love in her heart, so great that it swayed the heart of her father, letters were written across the sea telling how land values were increasing and when a confidential agent made a report to Paul Minton as to how John Forrester and his son were making ends meet in Rome, whenever there seemed to be a stringency, whenever the lessons were unusually expensive or clothing was needed, or a better apartment in a warmer, sunnier place became necessary, mysteriously some rich man away in the West paid a handsome price for a picture or a new tenant in the little house on the big island offered a higher rental. Some way it happened so that there was always money for a bright, warm apartment and nourishing food and comfortable clothing. There were always materials for John Forrester to paint pictures with, always the money to pay for the lessons for John Guido.

When she could not think of another thing to do to the little house, Amaryllis slipped into the library and sat on the table in the position that her father sometimes placed her and waited for him. When he came, he recognized that position and he laughed as he put his hand in his pocket and asked: "How much is it this time, Amaryllis?"

Amaryllis said: "Father, it's a lot this time. Do you think you can leave for a few months?"

Father said yes, he thought he could.

And Amaryllis said: "You know you said it was time Peter went to Germany and had some of his lessons there and some of them in England and some of them in France, and, Father, it is time for me to go to Italy. May I?"

Then Father straightened up suddenly and did not know exactly what to think.

(To be continued)

Y. M. C. A. TEAM GIVEN "ONCE OVER" TODAY

Again fans will see another hard fighting Y. M. C. A. baseball team in the field this coming year, which is determined to conquer the cup they lost last year to Northeast Brainerd.

"Doc" Steinfeldt will manage the team and has a large squad to pick from, and among the men are as follows:

The catching staff will find Lepinski and Larson doing the receiving and fans will see two of the best receivers in town doing their stuff for the Y. M. C. A.

Lepinski has had a great deal of baseball experience and should have a great year ahead of him. He is a good sticker, and for a while last year was among the list of leading hitters.

Larson who has had two years of high school baseball is about on a par with Lepinski, but he will have to hustle to keep pace with the veteran Lepinski.

There is little worry in the pitching staff as the Y. has the best set of twirlers in the League and will make things very hot for the rest of the clubs. These two men are Engbretson and Stevens.

Engbretson pitched wonderful ball last year and turned in over a 500 percent pitching average. He is a good sticker, something most pitchers are weak at. By early workouts he is in for even a greater year than last year and he has the stuff in him to do it.

Stevens is a curve ball artist and his control is great, which gives him a big edge in pitching. He works easy and has no trouble at all in the pinches, and with Engbretson and Stevens on the mound for the Y. they should have little trouble.

The infield is the biggest trouble to Steinfeldt, and will take some fine thinking in solving a winning combination on the inner garden. Among the infielders he has one veteran and that is Orth who is slated to cover first base again this year. His hitting is just above the 300 mark.

The rest of the infield will be picked from the following men: Bacon, Ted Anderson, Lowe, Wallen, Whitlock.

Engbretson will cover short stop when he is not on the mound, and this will be a great help to the infield.

The outfield will be covered by Nutting, Carlson, Ringer and Ericsson, so fans will see a classy outfield in the opening of the City League. They will be needed to stop the fast hitting South Side team, as the Y. is scheduled to play the South Side in the second game of the City League.

Nutting will cover center field and is a real man in covering his territory for hits are very scarce in his garden. He also lead the league in hitting and is out to try and gain that honor again.

Carlson will play in the right garden, and is another seasoned ball player. A 300 hitter, Carlson will complete a great outfield for the Y.

Erickson and other recruits will be in the relief role, and will make a strong line-up throughout the season.

From the famous photoplay, "The Magic Garden."

THE STORY SO FAR

Amaryllis, neglected by her parents, runs away and finds happiness with John Guido in "The Magic Garden." Although after this her father is ideal, and she learns to love him, she never forgets this one day of her childhood, and when a big girl, her father learns that the Forresters have gone to Italy, so he offers to rent the "Magic Garden" for her. Amaryllis, who has never forgotten John Guido, is delighted.

"Amaryllis," he said, "I've given away Forrester pictures until I haven't got a friend who has not one somewhere in his house. There is this to say about them. They are good paintings. I don't know a landscape artist in this country, or in Europe either, of the present day who can beat him. He hasn't got a nice temper and he hasn't very nice manners, but he can paint!"

Then Amaryllis said something else, and what she said was this: "Father, Mr. Forrester has had a long time to think things over. Maybe he is nicer now than he was. Just look what a difference there is in you. He couldn't know you now without thinking you are a lot nicer than you used to be."

Paul Minton laughed and said: "Yes, Amaryllis, I guess that is the truth. I think you have worked Love's alchemy on me as well as you have on John Guido and his father."

After that there was not any way for Amaryllis to be half so nice a girl as she wanted to be. Because her heart was so very full of love, and high hopes, and youth, she made something entirely different out of Peter, too. He did not turn his back and look from the window any more when she talked to him. He came over and sat on her chair-arm and put his arms across her shoulder. They had fine times riding their horses and playing all sorts of games.

Religiously Amaryllis tried to think for her father and for Peter. She tried to take the place that her mother should have filled. When she had done everything she could think of to do for her family, then she was free to slip to the telephone and call the architect who served her and tell him something more that she wanted done to the little house. She kept on thinking of things every time she went there, until by and by, along about the time that there was talk of taking her abroad for the first time, a very wonderful thing happened to the little house and the thirty acres of extremely valuable land that surrounded it.

Amaryllis—once the poor little rich girl left to the mercy of servants—is happy now keeping house for her father and brother. But one thing is lacking. She misses John Guido, the boy she met by the Roaring Brook when as a little girl she ran away from home. However, there is hope that he will some day return to the little house of happy memories and meanwhile Amaryllis is allowed by her indulgent father to spend time and money renovating that house to prepare for his home-coming.

The house itself had been repaired and bolstered up and helped out until it was practically splinter-new so far as being upstanding and reliable was concerned. It had shiny waxed floors. It had beautiful woodwork. It had softly tinted walls. It had the same furnishings that always had been in it and here and there new and different pieces had crept in. One thing had happened that was entirely different. On the right corner in the right light there had grown up the most wonderful studio for a painter that three of the greatest architects in the big city could think up. The plans that all of them made for what they would like to have if they had the money for it were taken and shaken together and made into a studio for a painter that had every single thing in it, every comfort and convenience and quirk of lighting that could possibly be designed. That was for John Forrester.

Over at another side there crept on another room that had not been in the little house before and that room was the loveliest room that Amaryllis could think up with some very able assistance from people who knew about the kinds of rooms that musicians liked. It was a room with walls of the softest, most delicate green like spring coming to the willows and the apple trees; a room with woodwork stained the softest grey. The grain of the wood showed through. Soft rugs of grey with a little bit of green, and beautiful chairs and tables and a great piano, a perfect piano, waited for John Guido.

One other thing happened after all the weeds had been taken away and every tree had had all the dead wood cut from it and all its cavities filled and there was not a thing left that possibly could be done to make that thirty acres more beautiful than it was—the very last thing of all that love could suggest to the heart of Amaryllis was an order that came from a lily field in the South. The garden was a flame of them. Of course they had to be housed in winter and reset in the spring, but no one cared.

There was one thing more that happened in the garden. Only one thing that was any different. Where the one red Amaryllis had been set, a space perhaps the size of a large room was cleared. Away down deep it began with cement and crushed rock foundation and came up a little above the surface and ended with a paving of white marble. A wall ran up at the back the length of it that gleamed white in the moonlight, white as the shimmeriest star high up in the heavens, and a great big urn, of white marble, all carved with doves and Cupids racing with garlands and flying ribbons, and fawns running away from the Cupids, crowned the center. And in this wonderful urn big bulbs of red Amaryllis were set each spring and fertilized, watered and tended until they lifted up great heads of red velvet lily flowers.

Sometimes on moonlight nights when nobody in all the house could find Amaryllis, if they had gone to the little garden beside the roaring brook, they would have found her on this marble floor all in a soft white dress—plain and simple, not much of a dress, chiffons that lifted and floated and carried on the night air, white as the whitest ray of moonlight. They would have found Amaryllis with her yellow hair unbound and her blue eyes either on the lilies or the stars. No one could have watched her long without knowing that what she was dancing as she tiptoed and whirled and floated over that marble floor was just Amaryllis, Amaryllis as the black-eyed boy had played it.

Once Paul Minton got started at being the kind of father that every man was intended to be, he resorted to no halfway measures. So, because there was this great love in her heart, so great that it swayed the heart of her father, letters were written across the sea telling how land values were increasing and when a confidential agent made a report to Paul Minton as to how John Forrester and his son were making ends meet in Rome, whenever there seemed to be a stringency, whenever the lessons were unusually expensive or clothing was needed, or a better apartment in a warmer, sunnier place became necessary, mysteriously some rich man away in the West paid a handsome price for a picture or a new tenant in the little house on the big island offered a higher rental. Some way it happened so that there was always money for a bright, warm apartment and nourishing food and comfortable clothing. There were always materials for John Forrester to paint pictures with, always the money to pay for the lessons for John Guido.

When she could not think of another thing to do to the little house, Amaryllis slipped into the library and sat on the table in the position that her father sometimes placed her and waited for him. When he came, he recognized that position and he laughed as he put his hand in his pocket and asked: "How much is it this time, Amaryllis?"

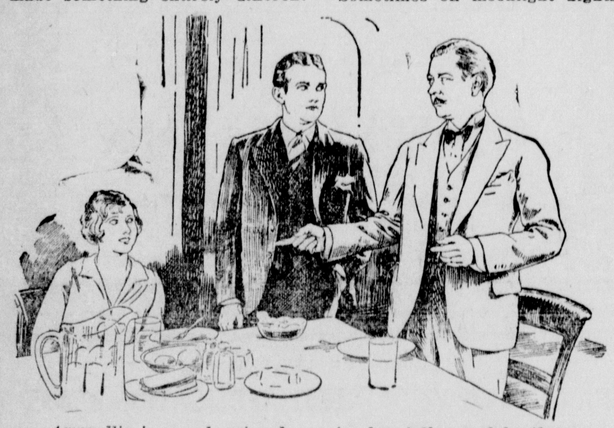

Amaryllis said: "Father, it's a lot this time. Do you think you can leave for a few months?"

Father said yes, he thought he could.

And Amaryllis said: "You know you said it was time Peter went to Germany and had some of his lessons there and some of them in England and some of them in France, and, Father, it is time for me to go to Italy. May I?"

Then Father straightened up suddenly and did not know exactly what to think.

Amaryllis is now keeping house for her father and brother.

Y. M. C. A. TEAM GIVEN "ONCE OVER" TODAY

Again fans will see another hard fighting Y. M. C. A. baseball team in the field this coming year, which is determined to conquer the cup they lost last year to Northeast Brainerd.

"Doc" Steinfeldt will manage the team and has a large squad to pick from, and among the men are as follows:

The catching staff will find Lepinski and Larson doing the receiving and fans will see two of the best receivers in town doing their stuff for the Y. M. C. A.

Lepinski has had a great deal of baseball experience and should have a great year ahead of him. He is a good sticker, and for a while last year was among the list of leading hitters.

Larson who has had two years of high school baseball is about on a par with Lepinski, but he will have to hustle to keep pace with the veteran Lepinski.

There is little worry in the pitching staff as the Y. has the best set of twirlers in the League and will make things very hot for the rest of the clubs. These two men are Engbretson and Stevens.

Engbretson pitched wonderful ball last year and turned in over a 500 percent pitching average. He is a good sticker, something most pitchers are weak at. By early workouts he is in for even a greater year than last year and he has the stuff in him to do it.

Stevens is a curve ball artist and his control is great, which gives him a big edge in pitching. He works easy and has no trouble at all in the pinches, and with Engbretson and Stevens on the mound for the Y. they should have little trouble.

The infield is the biggest trouble to Steinfeldt, and will take some fine thinking in solving a winning combination on the inner garden. Among the infielders he has one veteran and that is Orth who is slated to cover first base again this year. His hitting is just above the 300 mark.

The rest of the infield will be picked from the following men: Bacon, Ted Anderson, Lowe, Wallen, Whitlock.

Engbretson will cover short stop when he is not on the mound, and this will be a great help to the infield.

The outfield will be covered by Nutting, Carlson, Ringer and Ericsson, so fans will see a classy outfield in the opening of the City League. They will be needed to stop the fast hitting South Side team, as the Y. is scheduled to play the South Side in the second game of the City League.

Nutting will cover center field and is a real man in covering his territory for hits are very scarce in his garden. He also lead the league in hitting and is out to try and gain that honor again.

Carlson will play in the right garden, and is another seasoned ball player. A 300 hitter, Carlson will complete a great outfield for the Y.

Erickson and other recruits will be in the relief role, and will make a strong line-up throughout the season.
